This is the second book in a new series from an exciting new author. Eve Miller is an experienced classroom teacher and now a keen author. This book is a response to a direct request from teachers for suitable learning materials for this cohort of students.

It comes with free audio files, interactive software and powerpoint displays ( and open office equivalents) to help teachers teach and children to learn.

This book is designed to help children and young people to become more aware of the messages that they encounter whilst travelling. This is a vital life skill for children and young people, to avoid being unduly influenced in their life choices.

This is a value laden book that will support teachers in their work and help students to learn. This is the second in a series of 4 books written for Lawler Education by the same author.

The series is: Writing in Everyday Life 1 Making inferences, Writing in Everyday Life 2 Travelling, Writing in Everyday Life 3 asking questions, Writing in Everyday Life 4 Messages. As well as this we are making a master version available to enable teachers who want all four books, to save some money.

The book comes with interactive software to help children learn the correct words and to get them actively engaged with their own learning and engaging in what theorists call 'scaffolding their own learning'. The purchaser buys rights to copy the sheets and use them and the software in their school.
